

Kauzu is a cause for change. A new social venture that overthrows the current outdated job search process by empowering both the job seeker and job provider. Together, we aspire to elevate innovation, jobs satisfaction, careers, and the economy, by multiplying the power of individuals and networks.

Consider how long people have been job-hunting, back in the day when your mom and dad looked in newspaper classifieds, used a manual typewriter, and snail mailed their resumes, nervously waiting for a response for days or weeks. Now consider today, when we all sit comfortably in front of the computer, submitting dozens of job applications with a few mouse clicks – yet, still nervously waiting for a response, but now weeks or months at a time and with a lot more competition and noise..... In fact, while there are more channels to find jobs, it is actually much more difficult. What went wrong?

If you are a job seeker, imagine looking for a job like shopping online, where you feel empowered and rewarded, with the ability to assert your preferences far beyond your credentials; if you are an employer, imagine finding talents at the first sight, where like-minded, motivated, and qualified people are genuinely interested in joining you to accomplish great things together. It is a semi-automated system that empowers both sides while reducing time, costs, and turnovers.

Kauzu provides a platform where both the job seeker and the employer no longer have to go through the painstaking and outdated hiring process to find each other. To us, the resume and sending out hundreds of applications is a dead process. Through an easy to use, quick to set up, unique and meaningful connection and communications system, job seekers and providers effectively connect. It is also a place that encourages sharing of verifiable, active opportunities that broadens opportunities but in a selective and meaningful way. Lastly, built on a complex, adaptive system, each submission and process will enrich your profile, providing for greater refinement for future connections

Let Kauzu be your cause, that changes, enriches, and adapts to you. Join the Cause. Join Kauzu.
